

Buttons are replaced with check-boxes and the search box is squeezed to the right. This is similar to how search is placed in browsers (and I hope will be intuitive to users.) Moreover, I have borrowed the search icon idea of Mozilla Firefox. There is no search button and the assumption is that the results will change after each keypress.

Total numbers of templates is displayed. This number shows how many templates are available for the chosen options i.e. check-boxes selected and/or search keyword.